Cognac

We vat our legendary vintage cognac in oak barrels, which are assembled manually by a hereditary cooper. Thanks to the oak, our noble drink acquires its unique taste.

Cognac distillate is aged from 6 to 14 years – patience and calmness are important in this case.

Ordinary cognac gets its taste thanks to containers with oak staves.

Cooper

What is a cognac barrel? In fact, you drink it when you drink cognac. The color, aroma and taste of the drink, notes of flowers or fruits, chocolate or spices – it's all a barrel. It is from the barrel that cognac spirit for many years pulls out everything that will allow it to be called cognac in the future.

Bacchus is the only production company in which the cooperage is passed down from generation to generation. Using ancient technologies and using classical tools of medieval coopers, a hereditary cooper manually assembles oak barrels, skillfully creating cognac aromas.

In the park of "Bacchus" cognac barrels, the largest in Kazakhstan, there are 1,200 oak barrels with a volume of 400 liters each. They are made from raw materials that are over 100 years old. Over the years, the oak absorbs the best properties, which then passes to the drink, and the structure of the wood becomes dense enough so that the barrels do not leak.

One barrel can last 18-20 years. Cognac spirit is poured into it, which does not look different from water and has no taste – only strength. And only thanks to aging in a barrel, spirit becomes a real cognac. The physical and chemical processes occurring between spirit and wood give it taste, color and aroma.

Oak rivets (billets for barrels) are purchased in Nagorno-Karabakh, in some regions of Russia and Ukraine. The cooper saws, heats and bends individual strips of wood, from which the barrel is then assembled.

Wine

The climate in the foothills of the Zailiyskiy Alatau, where the Bacchus vineyards are located, is in many ways similar to the climate of the Champagne province. This is a wine-growing region in the north-east of France, the birthplace of the legendary Champagne wine production technology.

Grown grapes have unique taste characteristics, so "Bacchus" produces wine with unique quality characteristics.

Production technologies

Each stage of harvesting and production is controlled by a certified laboratory and is confirmed by regulatory documents.

Our company has implemented one of the most modern technologies of winemaking – desulphitation. This method allows protecting the wine from microorganisms, preserve its aroma and fine structure. We use cold bottling technology – we do not heat the wine so that our drink retains its original rich natural taste and aroma. With this procedure, we maintain absolute sterility.

Before bottling the wine, we run the drink through a sterile filtration unit.

Grape varieties

We create wine from 8 grape varieties grown in our own vineyards:
Pinot, Chardonnay, Risling, Aligote, Rkatsiteli, Kuldzhinskiy and Bayan-Shirey.

We do not use powder blanks and other additives. For the production of semi-dry and semi-sweet wines, we use natural concentrated grape juice.
